On The Way

The Mass in Slowest Motion: the Offertory, II

The offertory has three distinct parts. The priest prepares the bread and wine for offering, then himself, and finally the people. Last week we reviewed the preparation and presentation of the bread and wine on the altar.

In solemn Masses, the priest incenses the gifts and the altar. He swings the thurible first over the bread and wine. Then he walks around and incenses the altar, the place from which Christ's sacrifice ascends to the Father. Again, the smoke of incense signifies the rising of our prayers to God from the altar and from the offerings placed on it. In the Extraordinary Form or Traditional Latin Mass, the priest recites words of Psalm 141 while incensing the offerings: Let my prayer be incense before you.

Then the priest prepares himself. He goes to the side of the altar for the washing of hands. (Rest assured, he already washed his hands before Mass; this is only a ritual purification!) As he washes his hands, he prays another Psalm verse, Wash me, O Lord, from my iniquity and cleanse me from my sin (Ps 51:2). As is always the case in liturgy, the words and the actions have a unity. The act of washing his hands is a sign of the priest's appeal for spiritual cleansing.

It is a natural religious intuition that one should cleanse himself before approaching the divine. The priests in ancient Israel went through an intense purification ritual before entering the sanctuary. Muslims have ritual washings prior to prayer. And so on. The principle is this: God is the Holy One, transcendent and beyond us. To approach Him we must detach from the world and be cleansed from the sinfulness of the world.

Last, the priest prepares the people: Pray, brethren (brothers and sisters), that my sacrifice and yours may be acceptable to God, the almighty Father. Notice an important distinction: my sacrifice and yours, not the identical sacrifice. The priest, acting in the Person of Christ, offers the Sacrifice of Christ Himself under the form of bread and wine. The faithful offer spiritual offerings in union with Christ's.

The offertory clarifies that the Mass is an offering and sacrifice. It should keep us from thinking primarily about "getting something out of Mass." Yes, we desire to derive some benefit from Mass. But we do so only to the extent that we invest something and make an offering.

The bread and wine placed on the altar represent your offerings and the offering of your lives. As the priest offers them, you should be conscious of bringing your offerings as well. What are your intentions? What do you need to ask of God? What do you need to thank Him for? What sorrow is on your heart? All of these should be, in effect, placed on the altar at this moment, to be united with Christ's sacrifice.

With that in mind, your response to the priest takes on more significance: May the Lord accept the sacrifice at your hands for the praise and glory of his name, for our good and the good of all his holy Church.

Next week: the Preface

- Father Scalia

Sister Mary Sue’s Surprise Drive-Thru Birthday Party

On Sunday, April 19, the students and staff of Saint James Catholic School surprised Principal, Sister Mary Sue Carwile, IHM, with a “Drive-Thru Birthday Party.” From 1:00pm to 2:00pm, a steady stream of cars drove through B Lot, with their passengers shouting Birthday greetings to Sister. Sister later said, “What a birthday! And with social distancing in place! Thank you Saint James Catholic School!”

Saint James “Pop-And-Go” Drive-Thru Food Drive

On Saturday, April 25, Saint James hosted a “Pop-and-Go” drive-thru food drive to benefit our First Friday Food Distribution program. Donors drove up to B-lot, popped their trunks open, and one of the drive’s volunteers would remove the bag of non-perishable food, and take into the gymnasium, while the donor drove away. This innovative approach ensured that all involved would be able to follow all of the government’s regulations for these challenging times.

- Enjoy mealtimes and traditions as you build a vibrant family culture;
- Share your flourishing family life with neighbors, friends and those in need.
